Yoga can strengthen your body and mind, but what role does it play in a cancer setting?

Research shows yoga can lessen the severity of symptoms, improve quality of life at a physical, psychological, and spiritual level, and improve biological parameters.

Yoga is a quintessential mind-body practice combining movement, controlled breathing and breathing exercises, and meditation. The focus on the breath in all aspects of yoga helps to reduce stress, leading to a healthy balance between mind and body.

Yoga can help reduce our ‘flight-or-fight’ response that is common in the face of stressful situations and instead activate a state of relaxation and calm that can help relieve feelings of anxiety and distress. This can lead to improvements in overall health, as chronic stress is harmful to all aspects of our lives, including biological functioning, and has been found to speed the aging process. Other health benefits of yoga include increased flexibility, increased balance, improved mood, and reductions in fatigue, sleep disturbances, and inflammation.

In October 2014, the Society of Integrative Oncology published guidelines to inform doctors and patients about the safety and effectiveness of complementary therapies specifically for women with breast cancer. Around 80 different therapies were analyzed. They rated yoga as having "A" level evidence, the top level, supporting its use for women with breast cancer. In fact, a study conducted by the Integrative Medicine Program at MD Anderson found yoga helped improve aspects of quality of life and lead to better regulation of cortisol (a stress hormone linked to poor survival among breast cancer patients) in women with breast cancer undergoing radiotherapy through six months later.

The Integrative Medicine Center’s own research at MD Anderson also suggests that yoga can be beneficial in the following ways:

- Improved sleep outcomes
- Decreased side effects of treatment
- Improved physical functioning aspects of quality of life
- Increase in finding meaning from the illness experience as patients transition from active treatment to cancer survivorship

There are many different types of yoga and there is no evidence that one style is more beneficial than another. Taking into consideration safety and your level of physical conditioning, it is important to find an instructor, class and type of yoga that best matches your individual needs. The Integrative Medicine Center at MD Anderson offers several group yoga classes with varying levels of intensity (see page 2-3 for descriptions and class times).

It is important to consult with your primary care team before participating in exercise. To make an appointment at the Integrative Medicine Center, ask your MD Anderson physician to submit an online consultation request.
