Why raise the age?

Nicotine is addictive
Nicotine is highly addictive, and adolescents are more susceptible to its effects because they are still going through critical periods of growth and development.

Most smokers start before age 21
- Nationally, 18-20 year olds are twice as likely as 16-17 year olds to be current smokers.
- 18-and 19-year-old smokers are a major supplier of cigarettes for younger kids, who rely on friends and classmates to buy them.
- More than two-thirds of 10th grade students and nearly half of 8th grade students say it’s easy to get a cigarette.

Tobacco companies target kids and young adults
- Tobacco companies need to replace those adults who quit or die of tobacco-attributable diseases. Increasing the sale age will help counter tobacco company efforts to target young adults at a critical time when many of them initiate regular smoking.
- Since tobacco is so harmful, we should do everything we can to prevent tobacco use among young people. Increasing the legal sale age of tobacco products will help reduce smoking and save lives.

The Institute of Medicine predicts that increasing the legal age to purchase tobacco will:
- reduce the smoking rate by 12%
- result in 249,000 fewer premature deaths
- reduce smoking related deaths by 10%
- result in 45,000 fewer deaths from lung cancer
- 4.2 million fewer years of life lost
In the United States…

- Total annual public and private health care expenditures caused by smoking: approximately: $170 billion
- Annual federal and state government smoking-caused Medicaid payments: $39.6 billion
- Federal government annual smoking-caused Medicare expenditures: $45 billion
- Other federal government tobacco-caused health care costs: $23.8 billion
- Annual health care expenditures solely from secondhand smoke exposure: $6.03 billion
- Productivity losses caused by smoking each year: $151 billion
- Annual tobacco industry spending on marketing its products: $9.6 billion

Community support

Five states and more than 290 localities in 19 states have raised the tobacco sale age to 21.

- Hawaii, California, Oregon, Maine and New Jersey have all passed bills raising the age of sale to 21.
- New York City became the first major city to raise the sale age to 21 in November 2013.
- Cleveland, Chicago, Boston, St. Louis, Kansas City, Kan. and Kansas City, Mo., raised the age to 21.

References:
- Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids